MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

Dear Ladies,

I hope all of you enjoyed a wonderful holiday season, and I welcome you back to a new beginning in Club. Congratulations to the dedicated women who make up my board this year. They are Vice President Sara Demmin, Secretary Cindy Pepper, and Art of Soup Ways and Means Chairwomen Diana Frost, Shawn Roelke and Wendy Miller. Positions still open are Treasurer and Parliamentarian. Also congratulations to the fabulous ladies who make up my standing chairs: Wendy Miller - Federation, Hospitality - Diane Gabriel, Newsletter - Shawn Roelke, Publicity and Webmaster - Izzy Velasco, Laurie Haack – Auditor, and Library Liaison - Victoria Himes. Membership is still open.

My theme as president is “The Power of Women.” Each month I will highlight a woman of substance to inspire us. All throughout history there were women who accomplished remarkable things, but often they were unnoticed.

This month I begin with Catherine Lidfield Greene who was a mistress of a Georgia cotton plantation back in the late 1700s. She supported Eli Whitney for six months and was the first to theorize a machine capable of stripping seeds from the balls of cotton. While Whitney was her house guest, Greene added the final touches to the model that Whitney made famous and patented in 1793. Greene proposed the idea, financed it, and made the final alterations on it, but Whitney took the credit for it. Nevertheless, he never became a rich man because of it. Greene was a wealthy woman in her own right, and the cotton gin revolutionized agriculture for generations. What an accomplishment!

As women, we do many things behind the scenes just to get the job done. Getting recognition is wonderful, but it's not the reason why we do the things we do. Catherine lived during a time where men were in charge, and she knew that she wouldn't get any credit for the single most important invention to date. However, working with Eli to create the cotton gin was the most important thing she could do to improve her life and the lives of others on the farm.

This month, think about the things you do to behind the scenes, and realize how important you are to those in your life.

Warmly,
Evelyn
